

Field Notes

01 — COLOR

Ink #1B232D

Muted #6B7684

Sand #E7E2DD

Paper #F7F5F3

02 — TYPOGRAPHY

Hanken Grotesk

One family, four weights

Writing that lingers.

A quieter kind of internet.

Body voice at 15px / 400 with generous leading. Headlines in 800 with tight tracking; sublines in 500. One typeface carries display, body, and interface without ever competing with itself.

OVERLINE · META · LABEL — 600

03 — COMPONENTS

Share →

A slate canvas with a single coral glow, reserved for highlights — used sparingly, not site-wide.

FEATURED

Reserve dark for the things worth stopping on.

Slate #1B2530 base, coral used only as accent and glow. Body text steps to a cool muted grey for contrast.

Read feature

“The best pages give you room to think.”

Members

Quote

PERSONAL JOURNAL · EST. 2026

Notes on making things slowly.

Essays on design, attention, and the small crafts that survive the feed. New writing most weeks.

Start reading

Subscribe

FEATURED

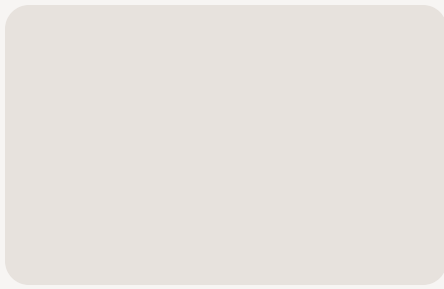

Essay · 9 min

The case for a slower homepage

Why the most memorable personal sites resist the urge to optimize every scroll, and what we lose when we treat writing like a funnel.

Read the essay →

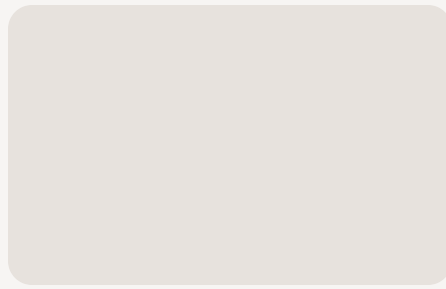

hero image · 3:2

Notes · 4 min

A desk setup that gets out of the way

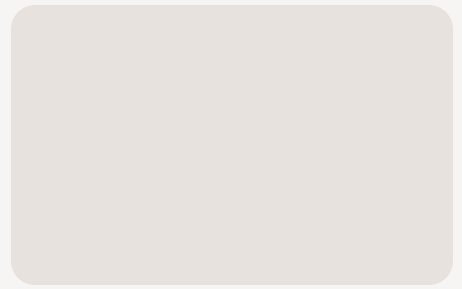

Tools I stopped noticing, which is the highest praise I can give.

Essay · 7 min

On keeping a public notebook

Thinking in the open changes what you're willing to think about.

Notes · 3 min

Three books I reread every year

And the one line from each that stuck with me the longest.

A letter every Sunday.

One essay, no noise. Unsubscribe anytime.

Subscribe